These two papers present the results of a first systematic and critical survey on the representation of women in «Domus» between the resumed of the magazine in January 1946 (n. 205) and its 40th anniversary in 1968 (n. 459). Leafing through the pages of 255 magazine issues - published on a monthly and bi-monthly basis by the Editoriale Domus (Milan) - the first paper focuses mainly on articles dealing with product design and interior design, while the second on architecture and urban planning. «Domus» was founded in 1928 by architect Gio Ponti and Barnabite Father Giovanni Semeria in order to popularize modern lifestyle in home design. During its first period of publication (1928-1945), it also dealt with topics considered of interest to women, such as the art of homemaking, gardening and cooking. Over the years, through its various editors, this legendary architecture and design magazine has explored a wide range of fields including applied arts, industrial design, architecture and urban planning with an international perspective. It always promoted original and innovative works and soon became a reference magazine with its affiliated periodical «Casabella» (1933-1964) and «Stile Industria» (1954-1963). The publication of «Domus» ceased in 1945 due to the war and it was resumed with a new look in 1946 under the direction of architect Ernesto Nathan Rogers (member of the renowned firm BBPR), replaced by Gio Ponti from January 1948. The editorial staff saw the constant presence of Lisa Ponti Licitra (Milan, 1922) before and after the war. As an artist and writer, Gio Ponti's daughter played a prominent role in the history of «Domus» for many years and became its editor in January 1985. In the post-war period, the magazine embraced new cultural trends and other women joined the editorial staff, contributing articles about works designed by women. Taking into account that the 1950s and 1960s were marked in Italy by an extraordinary vitality in architecture and design, both papers aim to offer a comparison between the first period (1928-1945) and the second (1946-1968) of «Domus», in terms of quantity and quality of articles published about works by women.

Keywords: Domus; women designers; women architects; women in editorial staff; Lisa Ponti Licitra

She is the author of numerous essays and books. Her research interests include twentieth century history of building technology, conservation and restoration of Modern Movement architectural heritage and gender studies in architecture and engineering.
- Chiara Serra, Research assistant, BA, MA, Civil Engineer. She graduated in Civil Engineering from the Politecnico di Torino and received the Engineering licence. She is research assistant at the POLITO-DISEG Department of Structural, Geotechnical and Building Engineering. She is working on the implementation of the European project MoMoWo-Women's creativity since the Modern Movement, dedicated to gender studies on women architects, civil engineers and designers from 1918 until today. Her research interests include the Modern Movement architectural heritage and gender studies in twentieth-century architecture and engineering.
- Annalisa Stella, PhD candidate, MA, is an architect. She graduated at Politecnico di Turin and she is a PhD candidate at the Architecture, Built Environment and Construction Engineering Doctoral Program, Politecnico di Milano. She collaborates in the activities of the European project MoMoWo-Women's creativity since the Modern Movement and she is an assistant in the teaching activities of architectural Design Unit at Politecnico di Torino. Her research interests include architectural design and critics and the role of drawing and representation in the development of the design and creative process.

● Three Projects for Council Houses by Lina Bo Bardi. From Virtual Reconstruction to Graphical Analysis

Vincenza Garofalo, University of Palermo, Department of Architecture

* vincenza.garofalo@unipa.it

The paper deals with the studies conducted in 1951 in Brazil by Lina Bo Bardi on the issue of council houses for the people. The three examples were never realized but help to describe the poetry of the architect to spread a "rational" way of living, from a small house until to an urban complex. The first project concerns a small house with a close relationship between architecture and nature. The second project concerns three housing units that embody the idea of the housing cell as a constituent piece of a community. The housing typologies to which the architect has referred are the indigenous Maloca, community house used by the Amazon natives, the Italian peasant house with its living and the domkommuna (communal house), settlement model realized in the Soviet Union between 1925 and 1932, modular cell designed for a full Community lifestyle. The third project concerns an urban complex which is based on a typology of economic houses on pilotis designed inside regular lots. Through the critical reading of the architect's sketches it was possible to virtually reconstruct the projects of the houses. Graphical analysis allowed to understand the geometric compositions and to highlight the relations between the parties.

Keywords: representation; Lina Bo Bardi; redrawing; graphical analysis

- Vincenza Garofalo, born in Palermo, Architect, Assistant Professor in Representation at the University of Palermo since 2014.
