CONFERENCE-WORKSHOP

ABSTRACTS

Presenting and Representing Women's Contribution to Architecture and Design: Domus and Abitare Magazines (1969-1989)

Caterina Franchini, Emilia Garda and Marco Vitali, Politecnico di Torino, Italy

✉ momowo@polito.it

By means of a comparative and multidisciplinary analysis, this panel presents the role played by Domus and Abitare magazines in representing and spreading contributions of women to Architecture and Design.

Concerning Domus, this study carries on MoMoWo Polito team's research presented in the previous edition of the conference-workshop, from 1946 to 1968. Celebrated its 40th anniversary in 1968, the magazine continued its activity, in an increasingly international perspective, between 1969 and 1989. At the same time, the editorial scenario on Architecture and Design is enhanced with the birth of Abitare in 1961. The magazine is an international open showcase that promotes Italian culture through Architecture, Applied Arts, Industrial Design. Founded by Piera Peroni (1929-1974), it was headed exclusively by women for thirty years: at the beginning by the founder, and since 1974 by Franca Santi Gualteri.

The research is carried out with a comparative reading of the editorial approaches and contents of articles. It provides, with a multidisciplinary approach –historical, technical and graphic– a critical interpretation of the perception and reception of the role of female in specialised fields. The comparison between the two magazines is particularly interesting considering the different editorial conception and targets. The variety of points of view decomposes and composes the tangible and intangible legacy of the female contribution to Architecture and Design.
