B. Dissertation

• Title of the dissertation: TIME-RELATIONAL PROCESS READING BETWEEN CULTURE AND FORM: TRANSFORMATION PROCESS OF PRIVATELY OWNED INDUSTRIAL HERITAGE SITES AND ACTOR ROLES

Description of the topic researched in the dissertation (maximum 20 lines)

This research seeks solutions for how to deal with the actor-based processual and value-based spatial complexity in the privately owned industrial heritage transformation process by providing solutions to conservation as well as readaptation in a multi-dimensional perspective via the new lives of those former industrial sites. It focuses on privately owned industrial heritage projects which have generated in top-down decisional contexts, and it is structured based on two main objectives, the first of which is to propose a set of actions to have better transformation projects focusing on the microprojects' outcomes. The second concerns the actors and process-related problems, and offers a comprehensive toolkit for the possible social actors which not only provides them with ideas about possible decision options, but also informs them of the pros and cons of those possible decision options that have been already experienced in the real-world cases.

To conduct such empirical research, an exemplar and observatory real-world cases for pair-comparison choices to the exemplar have been selected, and their presentation is organised in two parts. While the Beykoz Sümerbank Industrial Campus in Turkey has been chosen as exemplar, which represents an emblematic project applied in its top-down decision-making system with a great number of vicious circles, actor-based biases and value-based conflicts. While on the other hand, Leipzig Spinnerei and Le Grand Paris have been investigated as observatory cases. It offers diverse originalities in each part, while it investigates comprehensively the exemplar case using retrospective analysis of the exemplar including both ex-ante and ex-post phases of the transformation benefitting from cognitive mapping, social network analysis and expert reflections, on the other hand, it also offers diverse solutions for actors participating in these phases of processes in future implementations through multi-sited analysis conducted via complex social value approach, strategic choice approach and multi-criteria evaluation.

Other activities which may be worth to mention

In addition to these beforementioned research activities, I have been selected as an author for the journal of European Heritage Times which have permitted me to work with several German based organizations.

Description of the specific issues tackled in the research activity

During my research activity, I have been faced with a multi-dimensional looking to a complex phenomenon which have required to be a multi-tasking person for evaluating the issues under question. This has permitted me to follow different topic in different areas and gained me diverse knowledge in specific areas.

Description of most relevant results obtained in the PhD career I have learned several evaluation methods and various numbers of methodologies. Working on a multi-disciplinary issue for my PhD research, I have not only gained different methodologies, but also obtained know-how to develop a research project according to the necessary scientific areas.
